Seventh-Day Adventist Members To Hear Conference Report Saturday

Members of the Appomattox Seventh-day Adventist Church, Court and Moses Streets, Appomattox, Virginia, will have a report Saturday, June 30, of the denomination's nine-day summer convocation just concluded at New Market, Virginia.

Austin Goodwin, pastor of the local church headed the delegation from Appomattox County.

The old-fashioned camp meeting is held on the campus of Shenandoah Valley Academy, a co-education high school operated by the church.

Traditional preaching services in large tents were augmented with some 14 seminars taught in air-conditioned classrooms.

The most popular course was the "Compleat Marriage" which included exercises in learning ways to resolve conflict, develop communication skills and new habit patterns.

Local members will also share concepts learned in classes in Money Management, health nutrition, witnessing and Biblical Exposition.

The New Market conference was sponsored by the Potomac Conference of Seventh-Day Adventists with 15,000 members in 80 congregations in Virginia and the Washington, D. C. area.

Attendance reached 6,000 on weekends with approximately 2,000 camping throughout the week in motel units, dorm rooms, trailers and tents.

Features at the session included the ordination of three ministers, and evening evangelistic series and musical concerts.

W. O. Coe, president for Adventists in the Middle Atlantic states, told delegates that the denomination is growing at a rate of nearly three and one-half million members world wide.

The camp meeting ended last Saturday, June 23, with 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. sermons by the dean of Seventh-day Adventist ministers, H.M.S. Richards of Glendale, California. The over 80 clergyman founded the Voice of Prophecy radio broadcast. A pioneer in religious broadcasting, Richards has preached on the air for nearly 50 years and is author of the yet unfinished poem "Have Faith in God" with which he closes each broadcast.
